Wyo. Air National Guard offers new recruiting program

CHEYENNE – Traditional Citizen Airmen of the Wyoming Air National Guard wishing to help increase the force can now do so as the Wyoming Air National Guard rolls out the Guard Recruiting Assistance Program or G-RAP.

The Wyoming Air National Guard is among those units across the country utilizing this recruiting program to draw in traditional Airmen.

Master Sgt. Jeffrey Fry is the lead recruiter for the Wyoming Air National Guard. He said G-RAP could increase recruiting by as much as 15 percent. "We're very happy to have it coming on," he said.

Fry said it takes about an hour to enroll in the program. "I know we already have one person who has signed up and gone through the training." Wyoming Air National Guard Airmen have been able to enroll in G-RAP since Monday.

This program is only open to Wyoming Air National Guard Airmen who serve in a traditional one weekend a month position. Fulltime employees of the organization, retirees and any traditional Airman who is looked upon as a center of influence in local communities are not eligible.

Certified G-RAP participants can earn up to $2,000 for every person they help recruit who enlists and completes basic training. Airmen who want to participate can enroll online at <http://www.guardrecruitingassistant.com>.

The Wyoming Army National Guard also participates in the G-RAP program. Wyoming Army Guard Soldiers can enroll at the same Web site.
